

The Land of Mysterious...

It started off, with us playing hide and seek. So I went in the second scariest place in the house the attic...

(The first scariest place is the basement) I looked around and there was an old Grandfather clock. A dusty wardrobe and an old fashioned window at the end of the room. As I was finding a place to hide. I stumbled across an ancient painting, which looks like an ancestor of mine. I come closer being more curious forgetting about everything about the game and everything else.

I touch the painting, my hand disappears. I become confused then I realise it was a secret passage so I took a step in but I heard a loud BANG! The door closes on me. So there was no going back.

BOOM! Goes the sound. It looks like I have teleported into a land. A village to be exact but it does not look like a normal village it looks weird.

I look at the houses. There is an odd house, covered in scratches. So I decide to ring the bell, even though it looks abandoned.

To my surprise someone actually answered. I thought I would be going house to house to find some help. It looked like a girl in her teens. She had blonde hair and blue eyes like a normal girl, but she didn't look normal. She greeted me and we introduced ourselves. I told her my crazy story I thought she would call me crazy but she didn't....
